

Letter of Welcome

October 26, 2004

Dear Conference Delegates,

It is with great pleasure that I offer a warm Louisville welcome to all delegates of the 2004 Annual Scientific Meeting of the International Society for the Prevention of Tobacco Induced Diseases.

Smoking kills 5 million people each year, an annual death toll that is expected soon to reach 10 million. Therefore, it is difficult to overestimate the importance of this global health concern. It is my sincere hope that the combined body of expertise assembling for this conference will contribute to reducing the tobacco-induced disease burden by disseminating the latest research findings, forming research collaborations, and assembling multidisciplinary alliances.

As you are aware Kentucky represents the heart of tobacco country and we have many lessons still to learn in the area of tobacco control. Thus, it is anticipated that the Louisville conference may help to promote tobacco control in our own region and, thus, have a long-lasting beneficial effect on our population.

During your visit, I do hope that you will find the time to relax and enjoy the wide range of activities that Louisville, and the surrounding countryside, has to offer.

Thank you for attending this important scientific conference, and again, welcome to Louisville.
